Dear Daniel:

I wanted you to know I read your article in Newsweek magazine and was very impressed. You raise a lot of interesting points in your article that people from my generation need to be aware of. I think about how the generation that grew up in the 60's started out wanting to solve the world's problems and now they just want to avoid them. It is a disappointment. I think you are absolutely right, that unless something is done soon, those in your generation will not have the options to fix the problems themselves.

I hope you are not ready to give up on my generation yet, because I am sure they are not ready to give up on yours.

Sincerely,

Bill Clinton
